Thanks for the Order. With regard to the steroid injections, the inflammation goes down providing some relief.

As I indicated this morning when we ran into each other, the decision has been made to go with the surgery. I have missed place my notes on my last conversation with James, but will get back to you when I return from a family wedding and vacation. I leave tomorrow and maybe gone until September 26. I say maybe because if most of my family is at the wedding I might be able to shorten my vacation.

In any event, I will you a complete picture on James' condition upon my return.

I also hope you will no longer need your cane, although it is a lovely one.

Edith:

Here is the Court's Order. Not sure why the date stamp at the top is all messed up, but it is what it is.

Is James having any luck with the steroid injections?
